

University of Illinois Cancer Center Winter CME Series – 2025

January 22, 2025 | Chicago, IL

This activity is jointly provided by Global Education Group and myMedEd, Inc.

Target Audience

The series' target audience includes medical oncologists, hematologists, pathologists, oncology nurses, fellows, residents, advanced practice providers, family practitioners, primary care practitioners, allied health professionals, and other providers interested in the care of patients with cancer.

SESSION 2 DETAILS:

JANUARY 22, 2025 – WOMEN'S AND GU CANCERS

Statement of Need/Program Overview

Oncology clinicians face a critical need to stay informed about advancements in targeted therapies and precision medicine across breast cancer subtypes, as these innovations have the potential to significantly improve patient outcomes. Concurrently, healthcare providers require comprehensive education on recognizing and managing treatment-related side effects from newly approved therapies to ensure their safe and effective integration into clinical practice. For those managing genitourinary (GU) cancers, understanding evolving diagnostics and therapies in renal, urothelial, and prostate cancers is essential for optimizing personalized treatment strategies. Additionally, integrating multidisciplinary approaches and precision medicine into the management of complex breast and gynecological cancers is increasingly vital for delivering effective, patient-centered care.

Educational Objectives

After completing this activity, the participant should be better able to:

- Discuss the current and future applications of newly approved targeted therapies across breast cancer sub-types
- Identify the side effects of innovative, practice-changing therapies and incorporate them into community practice
- Review new diagnostics and treatments in the management of Renal, Urothelial, and Prostate cancers
